THE HOME PAPER

SAY!

(By CHARLES J. ARNOLD)

"Horses Pass Slowly"—Headline—The writer must have been looking at the horse I selected in the last Kentucky Derby as it passed the judges' stand.

Big Automobile Merger—A couple of big cars went together in a head-on collision.

Tomlinson hall authorities in Indianapolis have denied the use of the hall to marathon dance promoters on the grounds that it would be unwise to conduct a marathon dance during the prevalence of spinal meningitis in that city. That may be a reason, all right, but I can think of many more why a marathon dance should not be permitted.

For fear you did not happen to see it in the Indianapolis newspapers, I want to inform you basketball fans that Central Normal of Danville defeated the World's Champion Butler basketball team in Danville Saturday night by the score of 40 to 16. There was no intimation of a "long count" by Butler.

Now that they have a new chief of police in Indianapolis there will be no more crime in Indianapolis, maybe.

Well, it was just as I feared it would be.

When I saw Central Normal College of Danville defeat Butler, so overwhelmingly, Saturday night, that the Indianapolis boys could have hardly been classed as "also rans." I thought to myself, well this would make a big story for the Indianapolis sport writers, but it won't.

And it didn't.

Of course, the Hinkle publicity men had to say something about it but they just mentioned the "bare fact" that Butler was defeated.

Well, all I got to say is that if Butler is the World Champion in basketball, Central Normal does not belong to the World League.

I do not know what prompted it, but a fellow who sat just behind me during the game made a remark in words and figures about as follows, to wit: "Well, if that outfit defeated Purdue, Purdue must have a mighty rotten team."

And another one remarked: "It looks to me like, the Butler scouts overlooked some real good basketball players right here in Indiana."

The Dobbs Tire and Battery Service is the new name of the business operated on the North side of the square by Albert Dobbs. The establishment was formerly known as the Consolidated Tire and Battery company.

In announcing the change of name Mr. Dobbs stated that his reasons for so doing were to avoid confusion and to better identify the business for the public.

Earl Wiley of Clinton Falls returned to his home today from the Putnam County hospital, where he underwent an operation recently. His condition is much improved.

Dr. and Mrs. Herman Beyl who have been visiting the former's mother, Mrs. John Beyl will leave Friday for their home at Syracuse, New York.

At the close of today's business the plant will be moved from its present location at 21 West Walnut to the room at 28 south Jackson formerly occupied by the Craver Electric shop.

The new building will give the plant larger and more up-to-date rooms, and will enable it to serve the farmers of the community more effectively.

PROHIBITION FIGHT STIRS WASHINGTON

DR. BUTLER AND SENATOR BORAH PROVIDE FIREWORKS ON ENFORCEMENT QUESTION

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—(INS)—The thunder of prohibition artillery was heard again in the capitol today as the old year drew to its death, with both wets and dries preparing for a long siege of warfare in the new year.

A fresh controversy was projected into the turbulent wet and dry situation by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler New York educator, who declared in favor of "selectivity" in law observance. It drew the wrath of the dries, who termed his declaration everything from "silly" to "asinine."

The Butler flareup added spice to the battling which has raged in the capitol for a week. It came at a moment when the wet and dry armies were resting over the holidays in preparation for the approaching warfare when congress returns next week. In the meantime, speeches were being prepared at both ends of the capitol in anticipation of prolonged debates early in the new year on prohibition enforcement.

The demand for a report from the President's law enforcement commission, the utterances of Senator William E. Borah (R) of Idaho, the proposal to transfer prohibition enforcement from the treasury to the department of justice, and the regular appropriations for prohibition will furnish both house and senate with an opportunity to debate the dry question. In truth, it will be impossible to keep the subject out of debate, since considerable legislation will come before congress hearing directly on the subject of prohibition.

Senator Borah, meanwhile, was gathering information to prove his charges that the dry law was not being effectively enforced. He was preparing to defend his recent pronouncements against the rest of his dry fraternity in the senate.

"If I am forced into a discussion in the senate," said Borah, "I'll give the country plenty of facts about prohibition. The information is very easy to get."

The administration also was reported active, with its enforcement officials conferring over steps to improve the enforcement machinery. Both the treasury and justice heads were reported in accord on the proposal to transfer the enforcement agencies to the department of justice. There may also be a shakeup in state administrators especially where charges have been made of lax enforcement conditions.

The Butler controversy proved merely a diversion to the general warfare. The New York educator declared only "fanatics" wanted enforcement of all laws and that "free men" always will obey the law "by a selective process." This aroused the dries.

"If Dr. Butler's contention is carried to its logical conclusion," said Senator Caraway (D) of Arkansas, dry, "there could be no security of life, limb or property under such a code nor any organized law."

"It is perfectly amazing for a man to have as much intelligence as Dr. Butler is reputed to have and never give any evidence of it."

To this, Senator Harris (D) of Georgia, another dry leader, added: "I can only express great regret that a man of Dr. Butler's standing should issue such a statement."

ORDER PATROL BOATS SEARCHED

Liquor Missing from Smuggling Craft Flor-Del-Mar Believed Taken At Same Time as Black Duck Shooting

NEW LONDON, Conn., Dec. 31.—(INS)—The threefold investigation into the killing of three members of the crew of the rum-runner Black Duck was overshadowed here today by a separate inquiry into the alleged theft of liquor by Coast Guards from the smuggling craft Flor-Del-Mar, captured about the same time of the Black Duck shooting.

The theft charges followed a brawl in which both members of the coast guard and sailors from the submarine base here participated. Police reported that the fighters told them the free-for-all was a result of liquor stolen from the 4,000 case cargo of the Flor-Del-Mar which was unloaded last night.

Captain L. T. Chalker, chief of staff of the coast guard in this area has ordered a thorough search of all patrol boats and destroyers in an effort to find the liquor reported to have been stolen by the guard. Five guards have been taken into custody and face a court martial.

Jack Easley, coast guard and George Rupert, sailor from the submarine base, were seriously injured during the brawl.

The three ply investigation into the Black Duck slaying was featured by a dispute between Federal and Rhode Island officials. When United States attorney Henry M. Boss, Jr., of Providence declared he did not expect to present the case to a grand jury, Benjamin McLyman, first assistant Attorney General of Rhode Island, objected. He said that if the case was not presented to a Federal Grand Jury he would make every effort to present it to a State Inquisitorial body.

Federal and state attorney's also had words in the Newport Hospital where Charles Travers, surviving member of the Black Duck's crew is a wounded prisoner.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The killing of three men aboard the rum runner Black Duck, off New London, Conn., by U. S. coast guardsmen was described and defended today by assistant secretary of the Treasury Lowman as "unfortunate but unavoidable."

"They defied the government, and they have no one to blame but themselves," said Lowman.

FORD CARS HAVE NEW ATTRACTIVE RADIATOR

"A car is known by its radiator," said Mr. H. C. Foster local Ford dealer, who is making arrangements to show new bodies for the Model A Ford here in the near future.

"If your memory goes back to the cars of twenty years ago," he continued, "just think for a moment how the different makes of that day are identified in your mind. Isn't it by the radiator chiefly. If I mention any of the well known makes of today, doesn't the same identifying picture flash into your mind."

"Therefore when a car changes its radiator design, the step is one of importance. If it gains beauty and dignity, growth is shown."

Graceful New Radiator

"That is what has happened in the case of the new bodies for the Model A. Probably the first thing that your eye will take in will be the graceful new radiator design. And I am confident that however conscious you may be of other, perhaps more important improvements, this change will linger in your mind."

"While retaining the Ford individuality, the new radiator will be higher, narrower and designed along trim lines."

"The shell will be highly polished rustless steel. The top will follow somewhat the lines of the old shell, with narrower lines down each side, which curve into a juncture at the starter opening in the center of the lower section."

"As a whole the contour of the new shell is exceedingly attractive, blending beautifully with the new fender lines; a rod which arches gracefully across the front, and the head-lamp settings."

The Ford Medallion

"An oval medallion bearing the name 'Ford' in script, done in nickel on a blue enameled background appears at the top center of the shell."

In general, I want to emphasize that the new bodies will not be mounted on a new model car. Mechanically Model A will remain essentially as it is. But great beauty will be added by the new bodies and colors."

"The Ford Model A will now have, including features it already possesses: new body lines and colors, rustless steel trimmings, sturdy steel construction, a fully enclosed silent six-brake system, four Houdaille hydraulic double-acting shock absorbers, Triplex shatter-proof windshield, quick acceleration, ease of control and 55 to 65 miles an hour."

NATIONAL SCENE OF WRECKS

The National Road was the scene of several accidents over the week end, although no one was seriously injured. A Marmon car went over an embankment west of Reelsville; another turned completely over and landed in the orchard of Ollie Vaughn west of Mt. Meridian; an express truck went into the ditch just east of the Four Corners; and a Ford coupe was wrecked just off the National on the road to Greencastle.

Cancellia left Greencastle last Tuesday morning to deliver a truck load of fruit and vegetables to towns in this county. When he failed to return home that evening his father began an investigation and learned that he had made the deliveries. He later located his truck in Indianapolis but has never heard from his son nor secured any information regarding his whereabouts. It is said that Tony Cancellia had approximately $350 in money when he disappeared.

He had disappeared under similar circumstances once or twice before but after weeks of absence returned to his home here. Cancellia was married six months ago to Miss Christine Wright.

ROBBERY FAILS AT LAMBDA CHI FRAT HOUSE

THIEF FORCED TO ABANDON ALL BUT ONE OVERCOAT OF PILE OF CLOTHING HE HAD GATHERED

An attempted robbery at the Lambda Chi Alpha house, 312 Bloomington street, was frustrated when students staying at the house surprised a thief at six Friday morning. The man abandoned a pile of clothing he had gathered up and fled out the back door before he could be caught.

The only property found missing was one overcoat, the property of Kreigh Moody, San Francisco, California, a nephew of William Kreigh, south Indiana street.

The robber had evidently been going through the closets of the students while they slept, and had piled the articles he intended to take in a corner of the hall. When surprised by an early rising student, he was unable to take but the one coat. No money or other valuables were missed.

Six students are staying in the house during the holidays. They are besides Moody, Forest Crain of Mount Holyoke, Mass.; Philip Bradbury, of Saugus, Mass.; John Leahy, of East Saugus, Mass.; Byron Miller and Robert Hamilton.

Police were not notified of the attempted robbery because so little of value was taken.

DEAN L. H. DIRKS PLANS NEW HOME

H. R. Callender, architect, is preparing plans and specifications for the remodeling of the old Nelson property at 620 East Washington street, recently purchased by Prof. Louis H. Dirks, dean of men at DePauw university.

The house is to be rebuilt into a colonial style mansion at a cost of $8,000. Dean Dirks and his family will move from their present residence at 736 East Washington street into the new house when complete.

Ten rooms are planned for the remodeled home. Two of these will be fully equipped one-room apartments, all up-to-date. There will be a steam heating plant.

An addition will be built on the east side. A new white siding will surround the house and be surmounted by a green-stained shingle roof. Shutters will be green.

The interior will be newly trimmed, and hardwood floors laid. When done, the result will be one of Greencastle's finest colonial homes.

The old house, now empty, until recently was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Dean and by D. C. Scoobie.

Charges of intoxication were filed against Allen this afternoon by John Walton, state investigator of driver's licenses. He is held in the County jail.

SIXTY KILLED AS FIRE SWEEPS SCOTCH THEATER

TRAGEDY STRIKES MILL CITY

Victims Trampled to Death in Mad Rush for Exits—All Available Firemen Called to Stem Blaze

PAISLEY, Scotland, Dec. 31.—(INS)—Horrible tragedy visited this peaceful mill city this afternoon when at least sixty children ranging in ages from a few years to early teens, lost their lives in a fire which destroyed the Glen Motion Picture Theatre during a children's matinee.

The fire broke out from an undetermined cause while the theatre was jammed with hundreds of children attending a special New Year's eve performance staged for their benefit.

Most of the deaths were caused in the panic-stricken rush for doors and windows a short while after the first few wisps of smoke curled down among the youthful audience. Rescuers found unconscious heaps of children, many of them dead and others suffering terrible injuries, jammed against the doors and windows.

While an adequate check-up of the dead was impossible immediately after the fire, authentic reports placed the death-toll at sixty. Fears were expressed others would succumb from the effects of exhaustion and terrible burns.

More than 150 children were treated at hospitals for their injuries. Traffic through the main streets of Paisley, a city of 85,000 population near Glasgow, was completely suspended as the right of way was given to ambulances, fire apparatus and rescue cars speeding to the scene of the holocaust.

Scores of heroic rescues were reported by police, firemen and passers-by who pooled their efforts to extricate the children from the blazing theatre.

Many children were rescued by being pulled through windows and doors by police and firemen while suffocating smoke belched from the movie house.

Heart-rending scenes were enacted in front of the theatre as word of the tragedy spread through Paisley. Mothers who a short while before had sent the children to the theatre to enjoy the performance stormed the movie house in panic, seeking their little ones from out the tragic heaps of dead whose bodies were taken from the charnel house.

There is nothing better to stop coughing due to irritated throats. Just ask for Thoxine, put up ready for use in 35c, 60c., and $1.00 bottles. Money back if not relieved. All druggists.—Adv.

SHOW OF SHOWS

Copyright 1929, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"Show of Shows" the Warner Bros. Vitaphone picture was the source for the material on which these stories are based.

SYNOPSIS
Leo Hanlon, singing in Italy, was broke, meets his old college pal, Harry Cronk, Cronk, press agent for Exalted Films, agrees to try to persuade some director to give his friend a bit. Recalling that Larry Ceballos, the dance director, had stayed their college show, he arranges an interview for Leo. Cronk also gives him the key to his bungalow and replenishes his checkbook with a loan of twenty dollars.

INSTALLMENT TWO
Cronk's asthetic sedan transported Leo and himself to the evening's bridge game, which took place in an attractive bungalow on Vine street. This bungalow, Cronk explained, was shared by two girls, Queenie Quinn and Dorothy Troy. He further implied that Dorothy was by way of being something more than just a friend of his, and Leo could please him mightily by remembering it.

"In pictures?" echoed Leo. "Doing what?"

"Script clerk. She's on Warner's lot. That's where you'll be if you're lucky. But lucky or not, you'll like Queenie."

"Queenie Quinn—that's an odd name, isn't it?"

"She used to be Agnes Quinn when she blew in from Minnesota, but she assumed this tag for its advertising value. You know, the alliteration. Kind of unforgettable. Her excuse is that there are too many Aggie Quinns and that she gave the Post Office Department a break when she made them one less."

Leo found both girls most agreeable. Queenie was a lively, brown-haired girl of twenty-four or thereabouts. Dorothy Troy, a newspaper woman only recently come to Hollywood from Alaska, was somewhat older. Leo, after inspection of the girls, decided that Harry's "claim" on Dorothy was in slight danger of violation; he favored Queenie immediately. She seemed to possess the precise sort of animation he needed.

The bridge game was, as usual, merely an excuse for four people to sit and discuss whatever came to mind, provided, of course, it wasn't bridge. Chiefly they talked movies, in accordance with what many strangers dimly fancy to be a Los Angeles city ordinance. Since Queenie and Cronk were best qualified to carry on this sort of conversation, Miss Troy and Leo had little to contribute to the discussion. Queenie, however, Queenie rescued Leo from silence with a casual question; but before it could be developed into much of a subject for protracted conversation, Cronk deftly recalled her into the gossip of the studios.

"If some smart director over at your place wants a corking juvenile, I've got him," Cronk suddenly announced to Queenie.

"Juveniles are so plentiful we're combing them out of our hair," returned Queenie indifferently.

"But this one's a wow," insisted Cronk. "You can't afford to pass him up. I wish our outfit had a spot for him."

"Who is he?" Queenie wanted to know. Cronk indicated Leo, who wasn't quite aware of what it was all about.

"You mean Mr. Hanlon?" Queenie was incredulous. Cronk nodded. "I had no idea you were in pictures," Queenie said to Leo.

"Stage performer," broke in Cronk, before Leo could frame an intelligible denial. "Dramatic roles, also hoots and sings like an angel. Now there's a lad you can use. Can't you think of something he might fit?"

Queenie thought silently. "Well," she finally ventured, "if Mr. Hanlon can really sing and dance, it might be possible for him to get something in 'Show of Shows.' They're casting that now."

"Splendid!" Cronk's enthusiasm was genuine. "Leo," he resumed, addressing his friend, "there's where you've got to land. Say, there's thousands of dancing jobs in that, and if you can't foot it with the best in the West, then I'm Wallace Beery, and Noah, too."

"There will be an enormous cast," Queenie admitted. "It's a stupendous production."

Leo longed to stand and deny that he had the slightest talent to contribute to it, in the event he managed to get himself hired. But the enthusiasm of Harry and the absolute necessity of a job stilled him.

"What a cast!" Harry now was addressing Queenie. "I hear they've got John Barrymore, Frank Fay, Richard Barthelmess, Beatrice Lillie, Ted Lewis, Alice White, Georges Carpentier, Winnie Lightner and a dozen other stars."

"Several dozen others," Queenie corrected him; "there will be a hundred stars in the production."

"Fancy!" was all Leo was able to achieve by way of surprised comment.

"Queenie," said Cronk, with elaborate casualness, "is Larry Ceballos staging any of the dance numbers?"

"Oh, yes, several of them. He and Jack Haskell."

Cronk threw Leo a triumphant look. "It there's a time step in those dogs of yours," he said, "you'll work in the 'Show of Shows.' The chances are you'll get in the ensembles only, if in anything. But after all, for just this once you shouldn't get sore if they give Barrymore the better of it."

Leo had small hope for himself. "You're engineering what can't fail to be the world's most majestic hop," he told Cronk.

"You may be a big success," Queenie encouraged him, "who knows?"

"That's right, Queenie," applauded Cronk, "talk it up to him. Get him working on your lot and he's a sure thing to buy your lunch."

"No small reward at that," Queenie laughed.

RADIO NETWORK TO FIGHT CRIME

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 30.—(INS)—A state-wide radio network to fight the Indiana Crime wave, was to be the proposal of Police Chief Claude M. Worley of Indianapolis to Governor Harry G. Leslie here today.

Chief Worley has offered the Indianapolis police department's new radio station, WMDZ to the state as a center for an extensive state system.

"With Indianapolis as the central broadcasting plant we can cover the entire state," Chief Worley said. "I will ask the Governor to start a movement to provide all law enforcement organizations in the state with special short wave receiving sets built to pick up messages from WMDZ."

If every police department and sheriff's office in the state had receiving sets every highway and byway could be completely covered within the space of a few moments after the crime is committed. The time element would be reduced to such a minimum that the criminal's chances for escape would be diminished a hundredfold.

Chief Worley was to ask the Governor to submit his proposal to the State crime commission.

Nathan Call of Roachdale was a business visitor in Greencastle today.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mason, Beveridge street are the proud parents of a son Harold Eugene, born Dec. 26.

HITS

Looking over the Indianapolis Star this morning, whom should we see but the Tiger Cubs grinning at us from the top of Albert Bloemker's column, "Hardwood Double Dribbles." And a mighty good write-up of the Cubs was just underneath the picture. Once in a while a good team gets the credit it deserves, and this is one of the times.

"Casual Comment," in the Bloomington World, has this to say about the appointment of Donovan C. Moffett as DePauw athletic director, "Tubby Moffett gets the job as athletic director of DePauw. Tubby is basketball coach and will succeed 'Bish' Hughes resigned at DePauw."

Brazil Friday night!!!! That's going to be the scene of a real basketball battle. But the Tiger Cubs will come out on the long end of the score, with all of Brazil and most of Greencastle there to see them do it.

Something or other happened to our column in the makeup yesterday, so that it ended with an "As follows," with nothing following. But here is what was supposed to follow, believe it or not:

"Russell Alexander, formerly just Alex, the Hardwood hash hound, now director of publicity at DePauw, and ole' Blackboard have settled the stalling question. It all came about during a conflagration Friday afternoon. According to the former Hatchet columnist, the team on defense, seeking the ball, is to be blamed for the stall. Alex contended, and we agreed, that if a team tries hard enough, they can break up any stalling tactics in fairly short order. After that, the thing to do is to follow the fundamental rule, get the ball and keep possession of it."

We may have a few things to say about this stalling argument some of these days when we have more time than we have today. But just now we are going to fill up the rest of the column by a liberal use of the shears.

The Brazil Times has this to say about the coming game with Greencastle Friday:

"Next month will be a tough one for Brazil but O. K. for the home town fans as several good games will be played here. The schedule starts with Greencastle here Friday, January 3rd.

"Just about the same teams meet here that played last year to an even break but at the present writing Bannan seems to have his team a little farther along than Phillips. The Tiger Cubs have lost only one game out of ten, including Roosevelt High of East Chicago which played an overtime contest with Horace Mann of Gary."

"Casual Comment," of the Bloomington World, gives Greencastle a nice boost:

"Greencastle continues its victories, and this time Roosevelt of East Chicago was the victim, 39 to 29."

"Greencastle's performances makes them a strong contender for honors in the blind invitational tournament which will be held in a few weeks."

"With DePauw holding a victory over Indiana and Greencastle coming strong, gosh, we hate to have to swallow that kind of quinine."

"Through the Magic Net," in the Crawfordsville Journal-Review, has some more to say about Art Gross. But we think for one that that incident is over, and refuse to print any more ancient history. Gross played a good clean game Friday night, against Roosevelt. And that's what counts now, not what happened two weeks ago.

"Artesian Fan" from Martinsville, writing in "Hardwood Double Dribbles," in the Indianapolis Star, picks Greencastle in his "Big Ten." Evidently the teams that have played the Tiger Cubs have considerable respect for them.

"Ess and Ess," of Greencastle, whoever they are, are picking Horace Mann of Gary for the state title. It looks to me as if these "Esses" might look nearer home and pick the Tiger Cubs. They might be nearer right at that, for the Tiger Cubs gave Roosevelt a worse walloping than Horace Mann did."

Beautiful Color Photography In

Musical Play "Red Hot Rhythm"

Taking a page from the occasional moments of mirth introduced into drama, what the director, Leo McCarey, terms "beauty relief" intersperses the hilarious comedy of "Red Hot Rhythm." Alan Hale's forthrighting Pathe funfilm which is being presented at the Granada Theatre tonight and New Year's Day including special New Year's matinee.

Some of the most exquisite color photography ever filmed marks several sequences of this dialogue and dance picture which represents a revue staged in a New York supper club. Song and dance numbers, led by Kathryn Crawford and including a chorus of fifty beauties, are staged against a background of spectacular and colorful luxury. Careful blending of hues by Edward Jewell, art director for the picture, resulted in a setting akin to some dress of Scheherazade.

In addition to Alan Hale and Miss Crawford, the brilliant cast selected for "Red Hot Rhythm" by Director Leo McCarey, and William Conselman, who supervised the production, includes Walter O'Keefe, a favorite entertainer and song writer of note, Josephine Dunn, Ilka Chase and Anita Gervin.

Added to the Tuesday-Wednesday Granada's program will be an all-talking comedy "The Perfect Day" featuring those two popular comedians Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy. Sound Spotlights will complete the bill.

Granada as a special New Year's eve midnight show tonight only.

The petite girl who gave to the silent screen "Diane" of "7th Heaven" and "Angela" in "Street Angel" brings to her portrayal of "Christina" the added magic and charm of her voice which so perfectly expresses the winsome character she enacts.

Just as Janet Gaynor always lived her silent roles, so her "Voice with a Soul" gives added realism to the wistful little Dutch miss who forlornly tries on her mother's wedding finery and speaks of a marriage which is not seemingly to take place. And when she finally consents to go through the ceremony with "the other man," so her blind father will never know of her lover's desertion, there is a tear in her tone which brings an answering tear from every one who listens to her and sees her in the agony of the moment.

Your heart beats in accord with hers, and the happiness she gains when her real lover comes back is a happiness that you are glad to share with her.

All of which certainly is synonymous with art, and provides Gaynor admirers a welcome opportunity to applaud her really remarkable audible performance.

Charles Morton and the veteran character actor, Rudolph Schildkraut head the supporting speaking cast of "Christina," which the Granada Theatre is offering as its midnight show tonight. The Fox Movietone talking picture is based on a story by Tristram Tupper.

Candy boxes as favors will be given to the first two hundred attending.

The short subjects will consist of "The Voice of Hollywood" and A Talkatoon.

Article 26—Tournament Play and Conservation of Energy

This important subject can be classified under strategy. Tournament play offers a good study of condition and energy. It is generally accepted that certain styles of play are conducive to the saving of energy while other are not.

The High School coach whose team is a contender for honors in the spring tournaments should equip his team with the most energy-saving style of play which fits his material. His offense should be one free from blocking as this style requires more contact and more stamina.

A deliberate open game is recommended as the best offense in which to carry the attack to the defense in tournament play. This is especially recommended for first half play with the over delayed offense used most of last half to save energy, strengthen defense and protect a well earned lead. The fast break game, blocking game, criss cross games are not well suited for tournaments. However, the coach whose team knows the fast game and has used it some during the season should use it, say in the final game in a strategic way to cross up the opposition. If another style has been used in previous games, then the change may cross them up to such an extent as to throw them completely off. Basketball is a game of science and tactics and this is an example.

The zone defense is the most energy-saving and is good for tournament use. Because little is known of individual strength of opponents, the zone is of particular value the first round of the tournament. The more man power the coach has the less he has to consider the energy problem.

At tournaments the coach should safeguard his players against unnecessary expenditure of nervous energy. Teams should not be allowed to remain to watch the next round of play for two reasons: first, they will use up a lot of energy studying and following their next opponents; second, there is too much danger of overconfidence through watching their opponents play, especially if opponents did not look good or were playing under wraps.

GETTING UP NIGHTS

Is Nature's Danger Signal

Rev. W. H. Mitchell, Jeffersonville, Ohio says, "I fell I am doing real missionary work when I tell or write how my wife was relieved of a serious case of bladder irritation with Lithiated Buchu (Keller Formula). She had to get up 6 to 8 times each night." It acts on bladder as epsom salts do on bowels. Drives out foreign deposits and lessens excessive acidity. This relieves the irritation that causes getting up nights. The tablets cost 2c each at all drug stores, Keller Laboratory, Mechanicsburg, Ohio or locally at The Owl Drug Co.—Adv.
